2022 S4A Call for Proposals
Systems and Services Research to Build a Culture of Health

Two Categories of Research Awards: Developmental and Impact

This 2022 Call for Proposals (CFP) will provide funding for a new cohort of research studies to produce new, actionable evidence about how to help medical, social, and public health systems work together to address structural barriers to health and health equity, including racism and the social conditions that impact health. Research studies must understand how the proposed alignment strategy will be successful in dismantling forms of structural racism and inequities embedded within systems.

Developmental Awards - Up to $100k for up to 12-months to support pilot testing of a proposed systems alignment approach.

Impact Awards - Up to $500k for up to 36-months to examine the impact of the proposed systems alignment strategy. Applicants must provide documentation of pilot test results as part of their application -- publications, reports, working papers, research briefs, etc.

$2.5 million is available to measure Systems Alignment solutions:

Racism and injustice have become embedded in many structures of American society, including the delivery and financing systems that support health and social services. S4A research studies must propose collaborative, cross-sector approaches to dismantle forms of structural racism and inequities that are embedded within our systems.
